"Our aesthetic leans contemporary, so we decided to stage the table in a home we recently designed that embodies our look. I thought about the opulence in the book and that time period in Russia. Plus, I was inspired by the contrast of the beautiful surroundings and the dark and tumultuous feelings happening within the characters—the tablescape is a complete contrast, of old and new and of dark and light. Pink Versace Rosenthal soup bowls mix with black curvy-edged chargers, and purple cut-glass goblets from Atlas Event Rental contrast with a more modern water glass. The napkins and Flare napkin rings, by Kim Seybert from Pioneer Linens, add opulence with black and gold finishes. To give an old world Russia feel, we sprinkled my great-aunt's pink and gold depression glass throughout, added aperitif glasses for a shot of vodka, and found a great faux-fur accent piece to display Russian caviar and red raspberries."
